Checking items off 'to-do' list

We have now reached the point of the legislative session where lists are everywhere. It doesn't matter if they are the individual to-do lists or the bills eligible for consideration by the Senate Rules Committee, all of these lists are getting substantially longer every day. We still have a long way to go in the 2015 legislative session, so these lists are very important tools that keep legislators on task for the State of Georgia and the people we represent.

The Senate approved the Amended FY 2015 appropriations bill last week, which means we are halfway to fulfilling our annual constitutional requirement to pass a balanced budget. HB 75 increases the AFY 2015 budget by $276 million, bringing the total funding amount to $21.1 billion. Most of this funding increase will be allocated towards public school enrollment growth. Another $20 million will be aimed towards economic development recruitment efforts, while $4.8 million will be directed towards medical trials studying how cannabidiol may help in treating severe childhood seizure disorders. Since there were some discrepancies between the House and Senate on certain line items, a conference committee made up of members from both chambers will now negotiate a final version of HB 75.

However, the House and Senate have agreed on one very significant thing when it comes to the AFY 2015 budget—and that's the importance of keeping insurance coverage for school employees who work less than 30 hours per week. The Senate also included language in their version of HB 75 that strongly supports providing these hard-working employees with health insurance, and I am feeling hopeful about the General Assembly's chances of finding a way to SB 3 passed the Senate and will provide an alternative for parents who must temporarily waive parental rights due to circumstances such as military service or substance abuse treatment. The legislation, also known as the "Supporting and Strengthening Families Act," would provide an easier method to transfer caregiving authority to a grandparent or family member without the involvement of a lengthy court process. Ultimately, it will allow parents to adequately address the circumstances that impact his or her ability to adequately care for a child, as well as preserve family structure and stability. The bill will now move to the House of Representatives for consideration.

I presented SB 4 to the Senate Economic Development Committee, where it received a unanimous 'do pass' recommendation. SB 4 seeks to expand the definition of "urban redevelopment" to include the improvement of transit facilities, sidewalks, streetscapes, trails and bike paths. These surface transportation projects add a lot of value to redevelopment areas and often act as a catalyst for neighborhood growth and improvement. The bill will now be considered for a floor vote by the Senate Rules Committee.

Please continue to stay in touch with me and share your thoughts as we work through the legislative session, especially as more bills start moving through the legislative process. As always, I am honored to represent you in the 51st Senate District. N(Feb18,Z14)CA

Rescue on Appalachian Trail Income tax reductions for Georgia landowners

If you own land in Georgia, you may have a chance to significantly reduce your income taxes. There is a federal law that allows landowners who protect their land from development and protect the conservation values on the property to reduce their Federal Income tax liability by 30%, or 100% for those who have at least half of their income derived from agriculture. This annual tax savings can be continued for up to 6 years, depending on the value of the land. Additionally landowners can receive a tax credit for their Georgia state income tax worth up to $500,000. The way to qualify for this is through a land conservation easement. A conservation easement is simply a legal agreement that the land will never be developed. The owner still has all the other rights and privileges we associate with ownership: private use of the land; the right to sell or convey; the right to hunt, fish, hike, harvest timber or farm-sary structures or a home for a family member. For many landowners who are not interested in developing their family land, giving up a possible future opportunity to subdivide in exchange for keeping real money in their pocket today just makes sense. The IRS allows the landowner to take the value of these subdivision rights—which can be the majority of the land's value - and treat them as a deduction to reduce one's income. It is similar to the deduction one is allowed to take for donations to a church or other charity. The state of Georgia also recognizes the value of protecting natural resources and allows a tax credit for the landowner.

even the right to build neces- simple, the process can be complex. The Georgia Conservancy, one of the state's oldest non-profit conservation organizations, has a free service for Georgia landowners to help them evaluate whether this program is suitable for them. In the last four years, landowners working with the Georgia Conservancy have protected over 26,000 acres of land and received millions of dollars in conservation cash payments and income tax savings. Landowners who are interested in a free evaluation of their land's conservation potential are encouraged to contact Clint McNeal of the Georgia Conservancy's Land Conservation Program at 404-876-2900 ext. 113 or cmc-While the concept is neal@gaconservancy.org.

search and rescue mission this year," Chief Dyer said. "The conditions of the searches have been brutal with frigid temperatures and blistering winds. At times, these searches can be very dangerous and life threatening for search crews.

'Union County Fire/ EMA would like to remind hikers to be prepared, dress appropriately, know the weather, and know your limitations,' Chief Dyer said.
