Fireworks clarification at the Georgia State Capitol

By: Sen. Steve Gooch

(Ř – Dahlonega) The Capitol was exploding with activity as legislators rushed to meet the crossover deadline, so it only seems fitting that three bills related to the purchase and use of fireworks were approved by the Georgia Senate last week. While people were initially excited with the consumer fireworks bill passed last year, it quickly became clear that the law needed some clarification. Senate Bill 369 follows up on the consumer fireworks bill that was passed in 2015 and corrects a number of problems with the original legislation, including time periods of use, seller licensing procedures and locations for ignition. Two other bills connected to the sale of fireworks will also strengthen Georgia's trauma care network, if approved by both the General Assembly and voter referendum. Senate Bill 350 would allocate the proceeds from consumer fireworks excise taxes towards public safety purposes, including funding for the Georgia Trauma Care Network Com- both project cost and contract feedback! mission and the Georgia Firefighter Standards and Training Council. However, Senate Bill 350 cannot become law without the approval of Georgia voters. Senate Resolution 558 is the constitutional amendment that must be approved in order to enact the provisions of Senate Bill 350. The resolution also clarifies that revenues deposited under Senate Bill 350 will not go into the general fund. All three fireworks bills have now been transferred to the Georgia

House for consideration. I presented two bills for a Senate floor vote last week — Senate Bill 316 and Senate Bill 366. The first bill lifts the daily cash or gift prize limit of $1,500 on bingo games, but keeps the weekly prize limit of $3,000. This legislation benefits charities and local organizations that run bingo games as fund raisers. The second bill, Senate Bill 366, allows the Georgia Department of Transportation to use an alternative out to me with any questions, process for selecting and contracting project services based on the lowest priced proposal. legislative session. Getting Sick On New Year's morning, I woke up with a horrible sore throat. Then it got worse. I wasn't really well again for four weeks of flu and suffering. For a person who basically lives a healthy life, how did that happen? Since my whole interest in health is the connection between mind (emotions) and body, I had a great subject to study. What I did for starts was pep talk myself, that I could get up and do stuff. My self wasn't buying it. Then I became a little mean, thinking things like, "how can you get this sick and help other people? You don't know anything!" The more I thought that, the worse I felt. Finally a TAT colleague suggested I do TAT on the thought "What would happen if I got

A whole flood of answers came about things in my future that scared me. Bingo! I understood why I had allowed myself to get sick to avoid doing something I was scared to do. Growing up, getting sick was often the only escape, so it became a default setting for getting out of what I didn't want to do.

I wish I could say I got well right then, but the thing had a hold on me and had to run its course. My belief that physical illness has an emotional/mental cause had been validated. Then I just had to lie around til my body caught up.
